In this guide, we will show you how to get up and run with the H4N Pro zoom. You will learn how to record the H4N Pro zoom, format the SD card and how to record audio on the recorder. Follow the sections below to start. Before you start, first you want to register the H4N PRO with ZOOM and also activate CUBASE LE and WAVELAB LE. To record the device with zoom, you will need the serial number of the recorder on the back. You will also need to create an account with Steinberg to activate the software. Follow these steps to register the ZOOM H4N PRO and activate your software. Go to the Zoom Product Log page. Fill in the required information, including the serial number at the back of your H4N Pro zoom, and then click Send. Active Cubase LE and WAVELAB LE The H4N PRO zoom is included with free licenses for the DAW CUBASE LE, and the audio editing and mastering software, WaveLAB LE. To activate the software, you must create a Mysterberg account and use the download access codes to activate the software. Click here to get CUBASE LECLICK HERE to get WaveLAB LE Back to Top Before you can start recording with your H4N Pro zoom, you will need to format the SD card to make the drive recognized. You can use SD cards with a storage capacity of 32 GB. If it is greater than 32 GB, the card will not be recognized. For a complete list of supported SD cards, visit the zoom compatibility list and also visit the H4N manual. Follow these steps to format ZOOM H4N SD card. IMPORTANT: Formatting an SD card erases all data, so make sure to make a backup of important files before formatting. Insert the SD card and wait for the card to be recognized by the device. It can take a few moments. Press the MENU button and use the marking wheel to move towardsto the SD card. Press the dialing wheel to enter the SD card menu, select Format and then select SA. If you insert the SD card before turning the unit for the first first you will receive a message asking if you want to format the card. Simply select YES with the dial wheel and press to format the card. If you receive a cardless error when inserting the SD card, check the security tab on each of the SD cards. If the switch is configured in protected mode, then the card is blocked, it will not be read. If you are using a MicroSD card with an adapter, make sure the MicroSD card is inserted to the end. For more information see the Zoom H4N Pro manual. Back to top There are several different ways to record with Zoom H4N Pro. Either directly to the SD card, or it can be used as a standard audio interface to record audio on a DAW. Depending on the app you'll want to choose one over the other, but first you'll want to set the levels. If the levels are not correctly adjusted in the Zoom H4N Pro before recording, audio can start to clip or be too quiet.IMPORTANT: make sure to set the microphone level before recording at the Zoom H4n Pro. Press the RECORD button once to flash, and then use the Rec Level + and - buttons to adjust the microphone level. It has three different modes that you can select when recording directly on an SD card: stereo, four-channel or multi-track. Switching between these modes makes it easy when you need to record a single audio source as a sound effect, or if you need to record your band's rehearsal. The files are saved in folders, which can be accessed by pressing the FOLDER button below the screen. If you want to change the place where the file has been recorded, press the FOLDER button and use the dial wheel to select the new target folder. Press the MENU key, use the dial wheel to move to MODE and then press.Select Estéreo, 4CH or MTR and then press the dial wheel to change the recording mode.Select the input sourceThe MIC (the integrated microphone H4N pro- à € S), buttons 1 or 2 on one side. Press the Record key to set up the device to record by pressing the one Button again to start. Press STOP once you have completed the recording. If you are connecting an external condenser microphone through the XLR combined connector, you will have to enable Phantom power. To do this, press MENU, go to INPUT, then Phantom and select + 24V or + 48V. Adjusting the phantom power A + 24V will reduce battery consumption, but the capacitor microphones may not work as well as they should. If you are using an ELECTRET condenser microphone connected through the connector à € à € on the back of the unit (for example, a microphone mounted on a camera), you will also need to activate the Plug-in feed from the input menu. Consult the microphone user manual to confirm if you require energy. MTR and OverDubbing Back to top Zoom H4N Pro can also be used as an audio interface when connected to a Mac or PC. The device is compatible with the class in MAC computers, which means that additional controller software is not required. PC users, however, must download and install the H4N ASIO driver before connecting it, which can be found on the Zoom H4N download page. Follow these steps to configure the H4N Pro zoom with your computer. Navigate to USB inside the menu and then select Audio I / F. Select the sampling frequency to which you want to adjust the device, select Connect and connect it to the computer. Initiate your DAW, go to your audio settings and select the zoom as the main recording device. Select the input source by pressing the MIC (the integrated microphone of the H4N Pro à €), 1, or 2 buttons on the side, and then press Record within your DAW to start recording. While in the USB Audio I / F mode, you can press the MENU button at the H4N Pro zoom to change different configurations. You can apply effects, turn on or off the tuner, and also to alternate input monitoring, power and the power of the plug-in. Here is also where you will disconnect the device before disconnecting it from your computer.
