It's been more than a decade since "the lion fell in love with the lamb," and we fell in love with the first Twilight (2008) movie when it premiered — becoming an instant box office hit. Whether you're a self-proclaimed "Twihard" or you're looking to watch the saga for your very first time ("where have you been, loca?!" here's everything you need to know about watching the Twilight movies in order. Plus, discover more movies like Twilight movies in Order. There are some sagas and franchises, like Star Wars and Planet of the Apes, that immerse yourself in their fictional universe. The Twilight movies, however, are best watched in order by their release date. From the original Twilight film to Breaking Dawn – Part 2 (2012), here's how to watch the Twilight movies in order. 1. Twilight (2008) Welcome to Forks, Washington — a small town under a near-constant cover of clouds and rain with a population of 3,120 people, including the Cullen family and Bella Swan. While the Cullens have been in Forks for a while, Bella is new(ish) to town after moving back with her father for the first time since she was young. Once their paths cross, there's no looking back. 2. The Twilight Saga: New Moon (2009) After another dangerous encounter between Bella and the vampires, Edward makes the heartbreaking decision to leave Bella and Forks in an effort to keep the person he loves safe from the dangers of his world. Emotionally broken beyond repair, Bella finds solace in her friendship with Jacob Black — but can she really leave behind her one true love? 3. The Twilight Saga: Eclipse (2010) There's only one thing Jacob and Edward have in common — their love for Bella. In this third Twilight installment, the two enemies have no choice but to work together if they want to keep her safe from a vengeful vampire out for Bella's blood. 4. The Twilight Saga: Breaking Dawn, Part 1 (2011) It's finally time for the wedding of the decade — or the wedding of the century if you're a Cullen. However, Edward and Bella's romantic island honeymoon is cut short by a shocking surprise no one saw coming (not even Alice). 5. The Twilight Saga: Breaking Dawn, Part 2 (2012) The world looks different for Bella the vampire, but there's no time to adjust to her new life. The Cullens must act fast in gathering allies to protect their new family member, Renesmee, from the Volturi. Movies Like Twilight Streaming on Hulu Vampires Suck (2010) Using parody and satire to playfully exaggerate the characteristics and themes of the Twilight saga, Vampires Suck gives a humorous take on the vampire genre. Why Twilight Fans Might Like Vampires Suck: Us "Twihards" take our love for the Twilight franchise very seriously — but sometimes, it's good to have a light-hearted laugh at the expense of our favorite things. Watch: Vampires Suck * Vampires Suck is available on Hulu with a Max® add-on subscription. Get the Hulu Max, and Disney+ Bundle Tuck Everlasting (2002) Also based on a book, Tuck Everlasting is a fantasy coming-of-age story set in the early 20th century. It follows a young girl in love with a boy who lives a quiet, secluded, and immortal life. As she falls deeper in love, she must decide if she should join him in immortality or continue living the only way she's ever known. Sound familiar? Why Twilight Fans Might Like Tuck Everlasting: If Twilight was a period drama without the vampires, werewolves, and love triangle, it would be Tuck Everlasting. Watch: Tuck Everlasting * Tuck Everlasting is available with the Disney+, Hulu Bundle Basic/Premium. Access content from each service separately. Blood Moon (2021) Blood Moon is a supernatural horror movie that takes place in a small remote town, much like Forks, where a young woman uncovers dark secrets about her brother's mysterious disappearance. Why Twilight Fans Might Like Blood Moon: Similar to the Twilight movies, Blood Moon has elements of suspense, romance, and fantasy with a dark and moody tone. Watch: Blood Moon Mom Got a Date With a Vampire (2000) It's been over 15 years since the premiere of the first Twilight movie (we can't believe it either), so it makes sense that the saga tags at your heartstrings with nostalgia, just like your favorite Disney Channel Original Movies (DCOMs) do. Twilight (When faced with creating the interior, the team measured the house in Portland, and built various pieces of the house on the lot and on a stage in Vancouver.[56] The second film also attempted to clarify the location of Bella's room, as seen in the first film, seemed to be located in the front of the house, when in reality it was on the right-hand side.[56] Costume designers when the Portlanse was repaired after Twilight's release, wig and hair stylists when the aging the house had come to depend on the film. Twilight's production house, as produced in the first film on high-end, the territory, rather than in the community, because of Jacob's attachment to the wolves.[57] To Weitz, Jacob's house was the stepping stone into the forest world, where the reality of the werewolves is hidden. The production designer was faced with a "real world" versus "book world" challenge when the barn they located, described in the book as a red barn, was green.[57] Initially bordered by a green fence, the decision of painting the barn, aging it, and renovating the exterior proved to be a layout that fit well with Jacob's character.[57] After scouting more than twelve possible locations to film scenes that would take place in Volterra, Italy, the scouting team selected the town of Montepulciano, which they believe was the best representation of Meyer's description in the book.[58] Principal photography concluded with the scenes that were filmed in this area from May 25 through the 29.[8][9][59][60] For the face-off between the Volturi and Edward, the idea was to have a bigger "bang", rather than just the paralysis of Edward.[61] Initially what was a huge battle with vampires being thrown everywhere turned into a one-on-one fight between Felix and Edward, after receiving a stamp of approval from Meyer.[61] The idea quickly changed from the typical outlandish battle, to portraying Edward as an average guy caught in the middle of a bad situation; for Bella, conveying the feeling of being caught in the middle of a group of vampires fighting was important as well.[61] This scene also required special effects, stunt work, and figuring out how to portray vampires fighting at very fast speeds.[61] Overseeing the visual effects department for New Moon was Susan MacLeod, who had previously worked with Weitz during the production of The Golden Compass. [62] MacLeod enlisted Tippett Studio to create the computer-generated wolves, while Prime Focus handled the effects of the vampires.[62] In preparation for the aggressive task of making the wolves look real, Tippett artists studied wolf culture.[63] They also went able to reflect leadership and human muscle size by adjusting certain features of the wolves, such as their fat and height.[63] In February 2009, a group of artists was able to travel to Wolf Mountain Sanctuary, outside of Los Angeles, and see real wolves.[63] The artists were able to observe the behavior of both the timber and arctic wolves, who ran in packs of three to five. The idea was to give everyone a deeper feeling of the creature that they were creating.[63] One of the scenes Tippett Studio was responsible for animating MacLeod explained that creating the shape-shifting werewolves was not an easy task.[64] The wolf work included shooting "plates", or photographic imagery into which CG creations are integrated. Since the book described the wolves as being as big as horses, full-scale aluminum and board wolf cutouts were used as a visual reference for both actors and crew members.[64] Once the actors had a reference, the cutouts would be removed allowing the cameras to capture the scene.[64] In order for the CG wolves to be in sync with the live-action cameras and actors' movements, the team used match movers, a land surveying tool that recorded the shooting location's topography with reference marks.[64] A new 3D model of Jacob's wolf was the basis for creating the others.[65] A muscle system, which gave the appearance of muscles firing and flexing, contributed to this model. From there, the initial fur layout went to painters who were responsible for its color and groom.[65] They also added characteristics, such as wet hair clumping together, and applied it to the fur. They refined this look before passing it off to the lighting and technical directors.[65] One challenge for the production team was how to convey Bella's depression once Edward departed. In the novel, these pages were filled with the names of the passing months, and in the movie, would be represented as a visual effects shot with a camera circling around Kristen Stewart.[56] The window that was used for the original film did not quite fit what Weitz was looking for, so the production team created a bay window when recreating the Swan house.[56] The effect was one of the 300 visual effects helmed by Prime Focus led by visual effects supervisor Eric Pascariu, requiring matching two camera shots: one that shot the actors in a chair and the other shooting the view outside the window as seen from the house but on location.[56] Using a greenscreen, Prime Focus was able to enhance the changing of seasons with computer-generated leaves and falling snow.[56] Main article: The Twilight Saga: New Moon (soundtrack) The score for New Moon was composed by Alexandre Desplat[66] while the rest of the soundtrack was chosen by music supervisor Alexandra Patsavos, who also produced the Twilight soundtrack.[67] The Twilight Saga: New Moon: Original Motion Picture Soundtrack was released on October 16, 2009.[68] by Patsavos's Chop Shop label, in conjunction with Atlantic Records.[67] It debuted at number two on the Billboard 200 albums chart,[69] and climbed to number one a week later after selling 153,000 copies in its first full week of release.[70] Notable tracks from the album include "Meet Me on the Equinox", by Death Cab for Cutie, which was written specifically for the film and which debuted September 13, 2009 during the MTV Video Music Awards. In February 2009 it was announced that the franchise would take the name The Twilight Saga with the book's title separated by a colon, though the title that appears on-screen is simply New Moon.^[71] The first promotional poster was released on May 19, 2009.^[72] On May 31, Robert Pattinson, Kristen Stewart, and Taylor Lautner revealed the film's first trailer at the MTV Movie Awards.^[73] Following the release of the trailer, two scenes from the film were presented at the 2009 San Diego Comic-Con.^[74] A 14-second preview of the second trailer was released online on August 12, 2009, and the full-length trailer was featured before theater showings of the film BandJam.^[75] The film's third trailer was shown at the MTV Video Music Awards on September 13, 2009.^[76] Spike TV also aired a new trailer at the 2009 Screen Awards on October 27, 2009.^[77] American Idol finalist Allison Iraheta hosted an 8-minute block prior to the showing of the film in over 1,200 theaters across the United States, where she talked about her upcoming album and played some tracks, including "Friday I'll Be Over You", "Pieces", and "Trouble Is".^[78] In addition, prior to the film's release, author Stephanie Meyer made an appearance on the Oprah Winfrey Show to promote the film.^[79] Many theater showings sold out as early as two months prior to New Moon's release date.^[80] The film set records for advance ticket sales, causing some theaters to add additional showings.^[81] The film is also the biggest advance ticket seller on Paramount, surpassing Star Wars: Episode III - Revenge of the Sith.^[82] New Moon accounted for 86 percent of Fandango's online ticket sales the weekend before the film was released,^[81] and its total morning ticket sales on November 20, 2009, are estimated to total $13.9 million.^[81] Various midnight release parties were held to help promote the film's DVD and Blu-ray Disc release on March 20, 2010, in the United States and on March 22, 2010, in the United Kingdom.^{[15][83]} Special features include an audio commentary by director Chris Weitz and editor Peter Lambert, a behind-the-scenes documentary, and music videos.^[15] Unlike the DVD and Blu-ray Disc versions, the Ultimate Fan Edition DVD includes a 7-minute first look at the sequel, The Twilight Saga: Eclipse.^[84] Within its first weekend of release in the U.S., the film sold over 4 million units, beating Twilight's 3.8 million units sold in its first two days.^[85] In North America DVD sales, the film has currently grossed $185,166,822 and has sold more than 8,864,541 units.^[16] New Moon set records as the biggest midnight opening in domestic (United States and Canada) box office history, grossing an estimated $26.3 million in 3,514 theaters.^[86] The record was previously held by Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince, which grossed $22.2 million domestically during its midnight premiere.^[86] In 2010, the following sequel, The Twilight Saga: Eclipse, broke New Moon's record with $30 million in over 4,000 theaters^[87] but surpassed by Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows – Part 2, which made $43.5 million in 2011.^[88] The film grossed $72.7 million on its opening day domestically, becoming the biggest single-day opening in domestic history, beating The Dark Knight's $67.2 million.^[12] This opening strongly contributed to another record—the first time that the Top 10 films at the domestic box office had a combined gross of over $100 million in a single day.^[89] The record was later broken in 2011 by Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows – Part 2, which made $91.1 million.^[13] New Moon's opening weekend in the ninth-highest opening weekend in domestic history with $142,539,137^[90] and also is the tenth-highest worldwide opening weekend with $274.9 million total.^[91] At the time of its release, the film achieved the highest weekend debut in November, breaking Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire's record^[92] ($102.7 million) until The Hunger Games: Catching Fire surpassed it with $159.1 million.^[93] With an estimated budget of just under $50 million, it is the least expensive movie to ever open to more than $200 million worldwide.^[94] On Thanksgiving weekend, the film grossed $42.5 million, and including Wednesday and Thursday ticket sales, grossed $66 million. It has earned $230.7 million in total since opening last week, 22% more than the previous film grossed in its entire theatrical run. Internationally, the film grossed roughly $85 million over the weekend, adding up to a total worldwide gross of $473.7 million in 10 days.^[95] In its third weekend New Moon grossed $15.7 million in the domestic market^[96] and another $40.7 million internationally for a worldwide gross of $570.1 million. In its fourth weekend, the film dropped down to #4 with an estimated $10 million, bringing its domestic total to $296,623,634.^[97] New Moon received mixed to unfavorable reviews from critics. Review aggregator Rotten Tomatoes reports that 28% of 228 critics gave the film a positive review, with a rating average of 4.7/10. The site's general consensus is that "The Twilight Saga's second installment may satisfy hardcore fans of the series, but outsiders are likely to be turned off by its slow pace, relentlessly downcast tone and excessive length."^[98] On Metacritic, which assigns a weighted mean rating out of 100 reviews from film critics, the film has a rating score of 44 based on 32 reviews.^[101] Audiences polled by CinemaScore gave the film an "A–" grade.^[99] Robert Ignizio of the Cleveland Scene described the film as an "entertaining fantasy", and noted that it "has a stronger visual look [than Twilight] and does a better job with its action scenes while still keeping the focus on the central love triangle."^[100] Michael O'Sullivan of The Washington Post gave the film two-and-a-half stars out of four, praised Kristen Stewart's performance in the film and wrote, "Despite melodrama that, at times, is enough to induce diabetes, there's enough wolf whistling in this sexy, scary romp to please anyone."^[101] The Seattle Post-Intelligencer gave the film a "B" grading and said, "the movie looks tremendous, the dialogue works, there are a number of well-placed jokes, the acting is on point."^[102] Time Out New York gave the film a stars out of 5, calling it "acceptable escapism for those old enough to see it yet still young enough to shriek at undead dreamboats."^[103] Jordan Mintzer from Variety stated, "Stewart is the heart and soul of the film", and added that she "gives both weight and depth to dialogue...that would sound like typical chick-lit blather in the mouth of a less engaging actress, and she makes Bella's psychological wounds seem like the real deal."^[104] British film critic Mark Kermode gave the film a positive review, saying, "After an initial 20-minute dip, when I thought, 'This is actually going to be two hours of mopey-mopey,' I thought it found its feet." He also excused the film's characterization of Taylor Lautner's character, saying, "The sight of the buff, young guys running through the forest with their tops off was slightly smirking-inducing. But it's fine. They know what their target audience is."^[105] Mick Lasalle from the San Francisco Chronicle responded with a more mixed review, stating, "[E]xpect this film to satisfy its fans. Everybody else, get ready for a bizarre soap opera/pageant, consisting of a succession of static scenes with characters loping into the frame to announce exactly what they're thinking."^[106] Digital Spy gave the film 2 stars out of 5, praising Kristen Stewart for "carrying the film on her shoulders and, once again, bringing plenty of soul to a character who might otherwise come across as self-indulgent", but was critical of its lack of action, ultimately calling it "a draining experience."^[107] Roger Ebert gave the film 1 star out of 4 and said that it "takes the tepid achievement of Twilight, guts it, and leaves it for...dead."^[108] Richard Roeper graded New Moon a C– and called it a "plodding, achingly slow, 130-minute chapter in the saga."^[109] Since its release, New Moon has received several nominations and awards. In March 2010, the film received the ShoWest Fan Choice Award for 2009's Best Movie.^[110] At the 2010 Empire Awards, Pattinson was nominated for Best Actor and Anna Kendrick was nominated for Best Newcomer.^[111] The film won the award for Best Fantasy Film, while Pattinson won an award for Best Performance.^[112] At the 2010 Nickelodeon Kids' Choice Awards, the film was nominated for Best Movie, but lost to Alvin and the Chipmunks: The Squeakquel. Lautner won an award for Favorite Movie Actor, and Jacob and Bella, who were also nominated alongside Edward and Bella, won an award for Global Superstar; the Best Male Performance award was also given to Pattinson, who was again, nominated against Lautner. Stewart and Pattinson won the award for Best Kiss, while New Moon won the award for Best Movie.^[115] For the 2010 Teen Choice Awards, held on August 8, the film and its actors were given a combined total of ten nominations, eight of which the film won, and three separate awards going to The Twilight Saga: Eclipse.^{[116][117][118]} In addition, the film was nominated for Best Horror Film and Taylor Lautner was nominated for Best Performance by a Younger Actor at the 36th Saturn Awards, but lost to Drag Me to Hell and Saoirse Ronan, respectively.^[119] Lautner was also nominated for Best Performance in a Feature Film – Leading Actor at the 2010 Young Artist Awards.^[120] However, it was nominated for four Razzies: Worst Supporting Actor (Robert Pattinson), Worst Screen Couple (Kristen Stewart and either Taylor Lautner or Robert Pattinson), Worst Prequel, Remake, Rip-off or Sequel, and Worst Screenplay.^[121] Main article: The Twilight Saga: Eclipse In February 2009, Summit Entertainment scheduled a film adaptation of Eclipse, the third novel in the Twilight series, for release on June 30, 2010.^[122] Weitz would not be able to direct the third film of The Twilight Saga as it would be filming while New Moon would be in post-production.^[123] David Slade was therefore confirmed as the director of The Twilight Saga: Eclipse on April 22, 2009.^[124] Vampire films ← a b c "The Twilight Saga: New Moon (2009)". Box Office Mojo.
