Car dealerships and loan companies want to see proof of insurance before completing the sale of a car. Part of the equation is the price of the car. With only two exceptions, most states require all car owners to carry liability insurance on every car they own. Insurance companies have the means to submit an electronic proof of immediate insurance. If you are considering buying a used car, you need to start the process of getting insurance at the same time, if not before buying the car. The process is as simple as calling a number from 1-800 and providing the VIN. Lenders require full coverage, which includes comprehensive, collision and liability coverage. Although private sellers may not care if the buyer is insured, it is up to the buyer to have insurance cover before putting the key in the ignition. That is why lenders want used car owners to keep the car insured for the life of the loan. With insurance, the person could receive some form of compensation (although it may not be as much as they paid for the car.) It is possible to get insurance before buying a car. The new car vs. An individual can also start the process of getting cover online by entering their information into an online application on an insurer's website. What insurance cover do you need for a used car? Photo courtesy: Sturti / Getty Images The specific requirements of car insurance for a used car depend on the state in which the owner of the car resides and whether or not the car is the car. Old car insurance Photo courtesy: Barry Austin Photography / Getty Images Car insurance is based on statistics associated with the car. This extra step leaves some used car owners confused about how to get car insurance for a used car. Each state has its own standard of minimum for responsibility.
