Torrents on the webWebTorrent Desktop is for streaming torrents. Whether it's video from the Internet Archive, music from Creative Commons, or audiobooks from Librivox, you can play it right away. You don't have to wait for it to finish downloading.WebTorrent Desktop is fast, free, non-commercial & open source. WebTorrent is a streaming torrent client for the web browser and the desktop. WebTorrent is written completely in JavaScript - the language of the web - and uses WebRTC for peer-to-peer transport whenever possible. No browser plugins, extensions, or installation is required to use WebTorrent in your browser. Why? Imagine a peer-to-peer YouTube where viewers help to host the site's content. By making BitTorrent easier to use, we can get more people to participate and take the first steps to re-decentralizing the Internet. How do I try it out? See WebTorrent in action on the Web at Instant.io. Send a file to a friend using BitTorrent! Or, install WebTorrent Desktop for Mac, Windows, and Linux. Try out a fast, lightweight, new torrent client today! Despite their reputation, there are plenty of legitimate reasons for torrent apps. Some legal reasons to use torrents include general file sharing, Linux ISOs, and plenty of other things. Even some artists will willingly distribute their work through torrents because it gives them a greater reach. Thankfully, there is an abundance of them for mobile. If you're in the market, here are the best torrent apps and torrent downloaders for Android! The best torrent apps and downloaders for Android Price: Free / $2.99-$3.99 (each)Joe Hindy / Android AuthorityBitTorrent and uTorrent are two torrent apps by the same developer. However, they do act differently. The basic set of features is the same between them. That includes Wi-Fi only downloading, choosing your storage location, and support for all of the same protocols. That's where uTorrent stops as a basic, simple torrent app. BitTorrent continues by promoting legal music and video torrents by independent artists. BitTorrent is decent for music discovery as well as torrenting. uTorrent is better for a simpler torrent app. Both have free versions with advertising. BitTorrent is $2.99 while uTorrent goes for $3.99. See also: The best Android download managers Price: Free / $2.99 per month / $29.99 per yearChecketry isn't a torrent app for Android on the face of it. Instead, it allows you to manage and track your torrent downloads on your PC. It works with things like Steam, EA Origin, BattleNet, Google Chrome, FireFox, and more. However, for this list, we're willing to bet you're more interested in its support of uTorrent and qBitTorrent. You simply start the downloads in one of those apps and you can monitor it with this one from your mobile device. There is a subscription service required for all of the features, but the free version is usable. Flud is one of the more powerful torrent apps, but for all the right reasons. It boasts a simple, clear interface. That makes managing large torrents easier. Additionally, the app supports a variety of protocols, magnet links, RSS feed support, support for large files, and even a couple of themes. There really isn't much wrong with this one. The free version contains ads while the pro version does not. Otherwise, both versions do the same thing. See also: The best VPNs for torrenting right now Price: Free / Up to $25.00FrostWire is a popular torrent downloader. It features a modern, simple design along with some good basic features. That includes support for torrent files as well as magnet links. This one also features a torrent search. It's not very good, but it's there should you need it. Some other features include a music player and a media browser. They are also decidedly mediocre. Thankfully, the part where it downloads torrents works just fine in our testing. It's open source and free with ads. You can pay to remove them if needed. Most of the complaints with this one are due to the torrent search being really not great. Joe Hindy / Android AuthorityLibreTorrent is an open source torrent app with all of the basics. It's based on the libtorrent open source code and you can find a link to that in the Google Play description if you want to read it. The app has a simple Material Design UI with a light and dark mode. In addition, you can keep track of all of your active torrents. We gave it a try and didn't see any issues with it really, although some Google Play reviews do nitpick it a little bit. This is an excellent free torrent app overall and the looks just tie it all together. Price: Free / Up to $9.99Joe Hindy / Android Authorityznzb360 is a torrent app that also supports a bunch of services. Some services on the list include uTorrent, qBittorrent, Deluge, SABnzbd, NZBget, and a bunch of others. The app has a steeper learning curve and requires some things like login information. However, once configured, you can manage things like Sonarr, Radarr, etc without any issues. The torrent downloading portion of it is secondary to most of the other functions, but this is a great alternative to a lot of stuff. Tornado is something a little bit different. It doesn't download torrents on its own. Instead, it connects to your computer. That way you see the torrents downloading there. That frees up space and power on your device so your computer can carry the load. It works with Transmission, a popular cross-platform torrent app for most desktop operating systems. The app lets you add and remove torrents, see session stats, and other management features. The free version is a trial. The full version goes for $2.99. TorrDroid is one of the newer torrent apps. It gets all of the basics right. That includes support for torrent files, magnet links, most protocols, Wi-Fi-only downloads, and more. It also features a torrent search. However, like most, it's spotty and inconsistent. The design is simple and easy to use. The app is also free with advertising. Our only gripe is that there is no option to purchase a pro version to remove the ads. Otherwise, it's good. See also: The best free music apps for Android for legal music Transdrone works a lot like Tornado. It's a torrent management app for your computer. It lets you manage your seedbox or home server from a remote location. The app can start and stop torrents, add torrents, set priorities, view trackers, and more. The interface is a little old school for our tastes. However, we can't argue that the app isn't functional and stable. There is another version of this app called Transdroid. However, it's only available as a third party download from the official website. This one is good enough, though. tTorrent is one of the most popular torrent clients, and it has a bunch of features and that includes most of the basics. It downloads torrents, lets you change download settings, and supports links and peer-to-peer connections. The app even has encryption and a web interface as support for Transdrome and Android. The UI is modern and simple. Even the pro version is cheaper than average at $1.99. It just ticks all the boxes without complicating things too much. Best AppsGoogle Play Store Sponsored by WebTorrent is a streaming torrent client for node.js and the browser. YEP. THAT'S RIGHT. THE BROWSER. It's written completely in JavaScript – the language of the web – so the same code works in both runtimes. In node.js, this module is a simple torrent client, using TCP and UDP to talk to other torrent clients. In the browser, WebTorrent uses WebRTC (data channels) for peer-to-peer transport. It can be used without browser plugins, extensions, or installations. It's just JavaScript™. Note: WebTorrent does not support UDP/TCP peers in browser. Simply include the webtorrent.min.js script on your page to start fetching files over WebRTC using the BitTorrent protocol, or require('webtorrent') with browserify. See demo apps and code examples below. To make BitTorrent work over WebRTC (which is the only P2P transport that works on the web) we made some protocol changes. Therefore, a browser-based WebTorrent client or "web peer" can only connect to other clients that support WebTorrent/WebRTC. To seed files to web peers, use a client that supports WebTorrent, e.g. WebTorrent Desktop, a desktop client with a familiar UI that can connect to web peers, webtorrent-hybrid, a command line program, or Instant.io, a website. Established torrent clients like Vuze have already added WebTorrent support so they can connect to both normal and web peers. We hope other clients will follow. Features Torrent client for node.js & the browser (same npm package!) Insanely fast Download multiple torrents simultaneously, efficiently Pure Javascript (no native dependencies) Exposes files as streams Fetches pieces from the network on-demand so seeking is supported (even before torrent is finished) Seamlessly switches between sequential and rarest-first piece selection strategy Supports advanced torrent client features Comprehensive test suite (runs completely offline, so it's reliable and fast) Check all the supported BEPs here Browser/WebRTC environment features WebRTC data channels for lightweight peer-to-peer communication with no plugins No silos. WebTorrent is a P2P network for the entire web. WebTorrent clients running on one domain can connect to clients on any other domain. Stream video torrents into a tag (webm (vp8, vp9) or mp4 (h.264)) Supports Chrome, Firefox, Opera and Safari. Install To install WebTorrent for use in node or the browser with require('webtorrent'), run: To install a webtorrent command line program, run: npm install webtorrent-cli -g To install a WebTorrent desktop application for Mac, Windows, or Linux, see WebTorrent Desktop. Ways to help Who is using WebTorrent today? Lots of folks! WebTorrent API Documentation Read the full API Documentation. Usage WebTorrent is the first BitTorrent client that works in the browser, using open web standards (no plugins, just HTML5 and WebRTC)! It's easy to get started! In the browser Downloading a file is simple: const WebTorrent = require('webtorrent') const client = new WebTorrent() const magnetURI = '...' client.add(magnetURI, function (torrent) { // Got torrent metadata! console.log('Client is downloading', torrent.infoHash) torrent.files.forEach(function (file) { // Display the file by appending it to the DOM. Supports video, audio, images, and // more. Specify a container element (CSS selector or reference to DOM node). file.appendTo('body') }) }) Seeding a file is simple, too: const dragDrop = require('drag-drop') const WebTorrent = require('webtorrent') const client = new WebTorrent() // When user drops files on the browser, create a new torrent and start seeding it! dragDrop('body', function (files) { client.seed(files, function (torrent) { console.log('Client is seeding:', torrent.infoHash) }) }) There are more examples in docs/get-started.md. Browserify WebTorrent works great with browserify, an npm package that lets you use node-style require() to organize your browser code and load modules installed by npm (as seen in the previous examples). Webpack WebTorrent also works with webpack, another module bundler. However, webpack requires the following extra configuration: { target: 'web', node: { fs: 'empty' } } Or, you can just use the pre-built version via require('webtorrent/webtorrent.min.js') and skip the webpack configuration. Script tag WebTorrent is also available as a standalone script (webtorrent.min.js) which exposes WebTorrent on the window object, so it can be used with just a script tag: The WebTorrent script is also hosted on fast, reliable CDN infrastructure (Cloudflare and MaxCDN) for easy inclusion on your site. Chrome App If you want to use WebTorrent in a Chrome App, you can include the following script: Be sure to enable the chrome.sockets udp and chrome.sockets tcp permissions! In Node.js WebTorrent also works in node.js, using the same npm package! It's mad science! NOTE: To connect to "web peers" (browsers) in addition to normal BitTorrent peers, use webtorrent-hybrid which includes WebRTC support for node. As a command line app WebTorrent is also available as a command line app. Here's how to use it: $ npm install webtorrent-cli -g $ webtorrent --help To download a torrent: To stream a torrent to a device like AirPlay or Chromecast, just pass a flag: $ webtorrent magnet:uri --airplay There are many supported streaming options: --airplay Apple TV --chromecast Chromecast --mplayer MPlayer --mpv MPV --omx [jack] omx [default: hdmi] --vlc VLC --xbmc XBMC --stdout standard out [implies --quiet] In addition to magnet:uris, WebTorrent supports many ways to specify a torrent. Talks about WebTorrent Modules Most of the active development is happening inside of small npm packages which are used by WebTorrent. The Node Way™ "When applications are done well, they are just the really application-specific, brackish residue that can't be so easily abstracted away. All the nice, reusable components sublimate away onto github and npm where everybody can collaborate to advance the commons." – substack from "how I write modules" Modules These are the main modules that make up WebTorrent: Enable debug logs In node, enable debug logs by setting the DEBUG environment variable to the name of the module you want to debug (e.g. bittorrent-protocol, or * to print all logs). In the browser, enable debug logs by running this in the developer console: Disable by running this: localStorage.removeItem('debug') License MIT.
