Woodson's gentle, lilting story and López's artistry create a stirring portrait of the courage it takes to be oneself."—Publishers Weekly, starred review* "Woodson's lyrical text is gently reassuring as it moves between broad discussion and specific examples of difference and discomfort, which emphasize children moving across cultures but will speak to children from all backgrounds and experiences. A must-have book about the power of one's voice and the friendships that emerge when you are yourself."—Kirkus Reviews, starred review* "Woodson's poetic lines give power to each child's experience. Jacqueline is also a recipient of the Margaret A. This gentle, powerful ode to diversity and acceptance belongs with all children."—Shelf Awareness, starred review* "A beautiful and inclusive story that encourages children to find the beauty in their own lives and share it with the world. His work has been featured in Communication Arts, American Illustration Annual, Graphic Design USA and Huffington Post. A must-have book about the power of one's voice and the friendships that emerge when you are yourself."—Kirkus Reviews, starred review * "Woodson's poetic lines give power to each child's experience. The bold, bright artwork features a diverse cast of kids. --This text refers to the hardcover edition. This lovely and sensitive treatment of adjustment deserves a spot in any collection for youngsters."--The Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, starred review"Woodson catches the uncertainty, even fear, that comes with new situations. López's vibrant illustrations bring the characters' hidden and unspoken thoughts to light with fantastic, swirling color. Shifting hues and textures across the page convey their deep loneliness and then slowly transition into bright hopeful possibilities. This lovely and sensitive treatment of adjustment deserves a spot in any collection for youngsters."—The Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, starred review"Woodson catches the uncertainty, even fear, that comes with new situations. She was the 2018-2019 National Ambassador for Young People's Literature, and in 2015, she was named the Young People's Poet Laureate by the Poetry Foundation. Woodson's lulling free verse reassures the reader that the world will 'make some space,' while López's dreamy, near-translucent mixed-media illustrations thrum with playful joy. She wrote the adult books Red at the Bone, a New York Times bestseller, and Another Brooklyn, a 2016 National Book Award finalist. Born in Columbus, Ohio, Jacqueline grew up in Greenville, South Carolina, and Brooklyn, New York, and graduated from college with a B.A. in English. * "National Book Award winner and national treasure Jacqueline Woodson teams up with two-time Pura Belpré Award recipient Rafael López to deliver an empowering message to any child who has ever felt too different. She lives with her family in Brooklyn, New York.Rafael López won Pura Belpré medals for Drum Dream Girl and Book Fiesta, and has also received three Pura Belpré honors, two Américas Book Awards, and the 2017 Tomás Rivera Children's Book Award and Society of Illustrators Original Art Silver Medal. Woodson and López offer a needed message of comfort to preschool and early elementary students. Woodson, a recent National Ambassador for Young People's Literature, is one of kidlit's brightest stars, and this should find lots of eager hands."--Booklist "What will it take for a child who feels different to share her stories? Woodson's gentle, lilting story and López's artistry create a stirring portrait of the courage it takes to be oneself."--Publishers Weekly, starred review* "Woodson's lyrical text is gently reassuring as it moves between broad discussion and specific examples of difference and discomfort "which emphasize children moving across cultures but will speak to children from all backgrounds and experiences. He's a founder of San Diego's Urban Art Trail movement, created seven US Postal Stamps, and created official posters for the '08 and '12 Obama-Biden campaigns. Edwards Award for lifetime achievement for her contributions to young adult literature and a two-time winner of the Jane Addams Children's Book Award. Full-bleed illustrations on every page are thick with collaged patterns and textures that pair perfectly with melodic prose that begs to be read aloud. She received the 2014 National Book Award for her New York Times bestselling memoir Brown Girl Dreaming, which was also a recipient of the Coretta Scott King Award, a Newbery Honor, the NAACP Image Award, and a Sibert Honor. Woodson's superlative text sees each character turn that moment of desolation into an opportunity to be brave and find hope in what they have in common. This reassuring, lyrical book feels like a big hug from a wise aunt as she imparts the wisdom of the world in order to calm trepidatious young children: One of these things is not like the other, and that is actually what makes all the difference. combine bold with soft colors and textures in a slightly shaded tropical palette; compositions employ creative and insightful perspectives to suit the characters' feelings. The artist frequently incorporates a ruler into the illustrations, which perhaps speaks to the children's perceptions of how they measure up to others. Like Woodson's memoir Brown Girl Dreaming, this story places great value on literacy, reading, and imagination. She is the author of dozens of award-winning books for young adults, middle graders, and children; among her many accolades, she is a four-time Newbery Honor winner, a four-time National Book Award finalist, and a three-time Coretta Scott King Award winner. Woodson's superlative text sees each character turn that moment of desolation into an opportunity to be brave and find hope in what they have in common. Like Woodson's memoir Brown Girl Dreaming, this story places great value on literacy, reading, and imagination. The matte-finished pages feature illustrations in vivid, brilliant colors, with repeated appearances of flying birds and lush, twining vines and flowers."--Horn Book There's an essential acknowledgment that everyone will experience a time when no one is quite like them, when they can't find their voice, or when they feel very alone. López paints the book's array of children as students in the same classroom; patterns and colors on the children's clothing and the growing things around them fill the spreads with life. combine bold with soft colors and textures in a slightly shaded tropical palette; compositions employ creative and insightful perspectives to suit the characters' feelings. Each child feels very alone until they begin to share their stories and discover that it is nearly always possible to find someone a little like you. * "National Book Award winner and national treasure Jacqueline Woodson teams up with two-time Pura Belpré Award recipient Rafael López to deliver an empowering message to any child who has ever felt too different. There's an essential acknowledgment that everyone will experience a time when no one is quite like them, when they can't find their voice, or when they feel very alone. But her lyrical language also captures the moment when confidence sparks and friendships are born.
